Website Prototype — Findings & Walkthrough for Dana

Prepared with PostHog · a quick look at what we heard and what we built

WHAT YOU TOLD US

Here's what we heard from you

1

Keep it simple

Just a few pages: explain the service, show your tutors, and let people book — nothing more complicated than that.

2

Warm, not corporate

Clean and friendly, like a neighbor helping out — not dark, not stiff, and nothing that feels like a big test-prep chain.

3

Booking should feel instant

When someone books a time, it should show up as taken right away — no waiting around or refreshing the page.

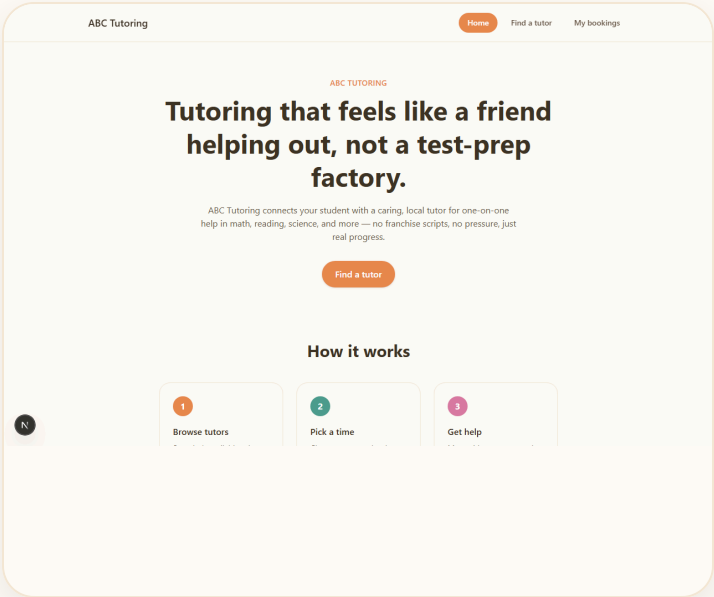

4

Know what's working

Which tutors get looked at most, whether people actually book or just leave, and whether your Facebook group posts are bringing people in.

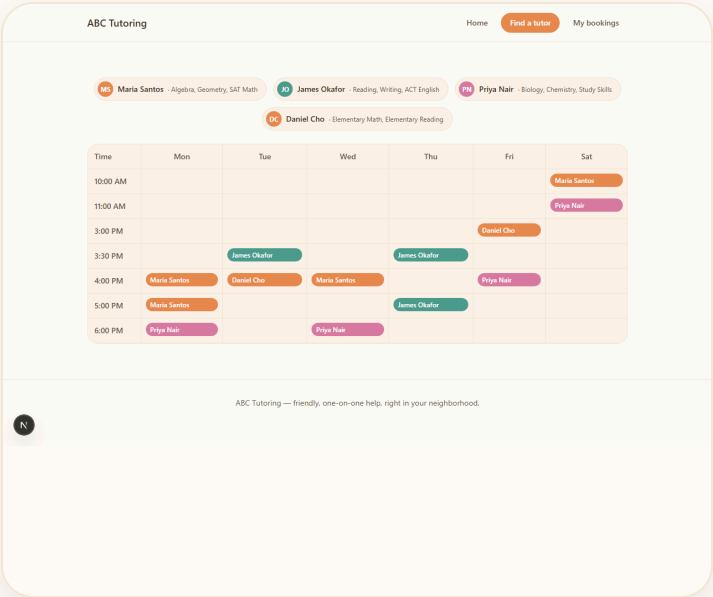

WHAT WE BUILT

A simple site that covers all of it

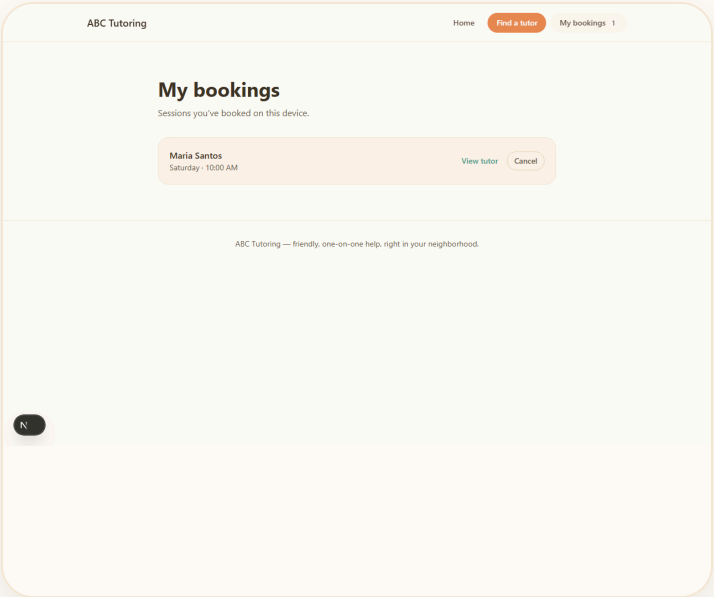

A warm, welcoming home page

Explains who you are and how it works, with one clear button to find a tutor.

Browse tutors on a calendar

See everyone's open times at a glance, by day and hour, and book a slot with one click.

Bookings update instantly

Booked times disappear from the calendar right away, and visitors can cancel anytime from "My bookings."

ANSWERING YOUR QUESTIONS

How the site tracks what you asked about

1

Which tutors do people look at most?

Every time someone views a tutor's profile, it's logged with that tutor's name — so you'll be able to see a ranked list of who's getting the most attention.

2

Do they book, or just leave?

We track the whole path — viewing a tutor, starting a booking, and completing it — per tutor. That gives you a simple "view → book" rate to see who's converting and who isn't.

3

Where are visitors coming from — especially the Facebook group?

The site automatically records where each visit came from. Tag your Facebook group links (we'll show you how) and you'll see that traffic broken out on its own, alongside whether it actually converts to bookings.

TRY IT & WHAT'S NEXT

This is a working prototype — ready for your feedback

1

Click through it yourself

Browse tutors, book a slot, cancel it — everything is live and interactive, not just a mockup.

2

We'll set you up with a dashboard

Once you're happy with the site, we'll get you logged into PostHog so you can see the tutor views, booking rates, and traffic sources yourself — no engineer required.

3

Tell us what to change

Wording, colors, which tutors are listed, anything — this is quick to adjust before it goes live.

Good to know: this prototype uses sample tutors and doesn't yet take real payments or logins — easy to add once you're ready to launch for real.
